Dear Fellow Shareholders,

Enthusiast Gaming (“Enthusiast” or the “Company”) is on a three-year winning streak and we are only getting started. Since our current leadership team joined the Company in September 2019 (the Company prior to such date, “Old Enthusiast”), we have drastically grown our business, from a property that had an audience of approximately three billion views of content per quarter to over 11 billion views per quarter today across our web and video platforms. All the while, we have dramatically improved our financial performance and significantly increased our standing and relevance in the public markets.

But an unknown group naming itself Greywood Investments, LLC (“Greywood”) is trying to wipe out our progress by taking control of Enthusiast with a less qualified Board of Directors and a vague plan with no stated change from the Company’s existing business plan. Don’t risk your investment with an unqualified team. Stop Greywood from hijacking Enthusiast’s winning streak.

Grew to a Leading Integrated Gaming Entertainment Company

Prior to September 2019	Today Under a High-Calibre Board and Executive Team

Consistent Improvement in Financial Performance

The reality is, Old Enthusiast was heading into possible insolvency prior to our leadership taking over the Company.

- As at June 30, 2019 (the last reported period under Old Enthusiast), Old Enthusiast reported total cash of $9.4 million versus total debt and vendor obligations of approximately $40.0 million.
- As at June 30, 2019, Old Enthusiast had total current assets of $12.8 million versus a staggering current liability balance of $33.8 million. $10.0 million of the total debt was issued months prior to the consummation of Old Enthusiast's merger with J55 Capital Corp. in September 2019 (when our current leadership team joined the Company) in order to provide bridge financing to complete that transaction, without which it was questionable whether Old Enthusiast would be a going concern.
- Although Old Enthusiast reported growing revenues of $4.0 million for the three months ended June 30, 2019 versus $2.6 million for the comparative 2018 period, it did so at a corresponding increasing loss, generating a net loss and comprehensive loss of $3.7 million for the three months ended June 30, 2019 versus a net gain of $0.0 million for the comparative 2018 period.

In contrast to the $4.0 million in revenue Old Enthusiast last reported for the three months ended June 30, 2019, we most recently reported:

- Record-breaking revenue of $47.2 million for the three months ended March 31, 2022, a 57% year-over-year increase, which was well ahead of analysts' estimates.
- A 127% year-over-year increase in gross profit in what is historically a softer quarter for us due to seasonal trends.
- An increase in our gross margin for the fifth consecutive quarter to 28.6% for the three months ended March 31, 2022, an increase of 880 bps compared to the same period last year.
- An expectation to be both EBITDA and cash-flow positive by the end of this year.

We are well positioned to continue delivering rapid top-line revenue growth, while achieving substantial margin expansion and strengthening our direct sales pipeline. As evidenced by Enthusiast's solid performance in past quarters, we are confident that this momentum will carry into the future and generate sustainable value for the benefit of all of our shareholders over the long term.

Additionally, as a result of our recent vendor obligation conversions into common shares of the Company (where we settled certain deferred purchase price and earn-out payments in common shares in lieu of cash), we also find ourselves in a strong financial position with a strong net positive working capital position versus the massive deficit at the time our current leadership team joined Enthusiast.

Increasing Standing in Capital Market Community

At the time our current leadership team joined the Company, Old Enthusiast had a market capitalization of approximately $83 million and had raised in total approximately $24 million including its go public offering of approximately $8.5 million. Old Enthusiast had only one sell side research analyst providing research coverage, was listed on the Toronto Venture Exchange and traded on average 0.3 million shares (approximately $0.4 million in value) per day for the period since listing on October 4, 2018 until August 29, 2019, when Old Enthusiast stock was halted from trading.

In stark contrast, Enthusiast is now listed on both the Toronto Stock Exchange and the NASDAQ, having completed its US-listing and US$52.9 million raise. Today, the Company is covered by seven sell side research analysts, has a market capitalization of approximately $436 million and trades on average 1.6 million shares (approximately $6.7 million in value) per day for the twelve-month period ended June 27, 2022.

This has culminated in greater access to capital and an ability to execute on our accretive M&A strategy. Since our current leadership team joined Enthusiast, we have raised more than $200 million in capital and have completed more than $190 million in acquisitions and have significantly outperformed our peers in the capital markets.

Enthusiast is on a Strong Trajectory for Future Growth

We are at the forefront of growth. Our strategy to grow our higher-margin revenue streams while expanding our direct sales and subscription offerings is paying off. Our expansion of in-game purchasing opportunities and monthly subscription offerings contributed to our accelerated growth, particularly from the better-than-expected contributions from Addicting Games and U.GG. For the three-month period ended March 31, 2022, our direct sales revenue was up 136% year-over-year, while recurring subscription revenue was up 83% year-over-year.

At the same time, we recognize that the recent macroeconomic instability and multiple compression in the broader market means the share price has not fully reflected these successes. The share prices of esports companies have all taken a hit. Multiples have been reset. High-growth companies like ours are out of favour. Top-line revenue is not enough in these times, as investors are looking for profitability. Despite this, Enthusiast shares continue to outperform our industry peers and all seven analysts covering the Company have a “buy” or “outperform” rating on our shares.

We continue to focus on generating content for our millions of monthly viewers and monetizing our media assets. We are committed to building the largest gaming platform that will position the Company as a go-to partner for brands and advertisers.

Enthusiast is committed to buying and building video game fan communities to create a platform for gamers and esports fans to connect, consume, and create content. To get Enthusiast to where shareholders, employees and other stakeholders want it to be in terms of growth and profitability as soon as possible, hard business decisions have to be made. Integration in any business is a challenge – and that challenge is amplified at high-growth companies like ours. Our Board and management team are doing everything they can to professionalize the business and implement a performance culture. By setting and measuring against financial targets, internal controls and performance metrics, the Company is and will be accountable to shareholders and positioned to unlock greater value. Now is not the time to risk your investments to unproven activist nominees who, quite simply, are not up to the job.

By contrast, Greywood's director slate fails to present a single candidate with both recent and sufficient public company experience. Greywood's singular focus on our director and CEO Adrian Montgomery is a clear vendetta based solely on self-serving complaints and personal attacks. The list of grievances that Greywood has put forward, which it claims to be about "culture and governance issues," are unfounded and have nothing to do with creating long-term shareholder value. Greywood is launching personal attacks to distract our shareholders from the fact it has a self-serving agenda, no original business plan and an unqualified slate of director nominees.

Activist Fund in the Dark with Suspect Motives

Shareholders are right to question who Greywood is and whose interests it serves. Greywood has kept details about itself under wraps and there is limited information on who controls Greywood, its operations, or its track record – and most importantly, its intentions for Enthusiast. It has not yet articulated how it will create long-term shareholder value at Enthusiast and its campaign is solely designed as an attempt to install Greywood's handpicked director nominees and take control of the Company without paying a premium for such control.

Greywood's nominees have limited public markets experience at companies similar in size and scope as Enthusiast with limited relevant commercial experience, which should make shareholders of Enthusiast question whether Greywood's nominees have the knowledge to craft a realistic and compelling go-forward business plan. Additionally, none of Greywood's nominees has professional sports management experience.

Greywood has no original business plan for Enthusiast. Its suggestions are simply endorsing what the Company has already been doing. For example: We agree with Greywood that the U.S. market has an attractive talent pool. That's why our Los Angeles office is Enthusiast's largest office, and we are actively hiring there and in New York City, Boston and Austin. In fact, approximately 150 employees, or approximately 70% of our staff, are in the U.S. today compared to less than 20 employees in 2019.

In its letter sent to Enthusiast on November 19, 2021, Greywood wanted Enthusiast to chase after commercially unproven objects like "gamefi, NFT's, metaverse opportunities", a suggestion that seems to be based only on industry chatter. Doing so would not be prudent at this stage, as Enthusiast is on a path to profitability. As such, disciplined spending is paramount. Our leadership team's main goal for the past two years has been to focus on gross margin expansion. This approach has seen our gross margin improve to 28.4% for the period ended March 31, 2022, from just 16% in 2019. To achieve this, our leadership team, led by Mr. Montgomery, has reworked our entire business model, shifting away from low-margin programmatic advertising to more lucrative direct sales. We are on the cusp of achieving this goal by the end of 2022. In addition to the costly distraction caused by Greywood's dissident campaign, the risk of deviating from our sound business plan – and pushing out profitability by doing what Greywood is suggesting – could be disastrous for shareholders.

Open Offer to Greywood

Notwithstanding overwhelming shareholder support and incredible progress made by Enthusiast in a short period of time, the Company is keen on moving past the distraction. In this regard, the Company has extended an open offer to Greywood to appoint a nominee of its choosing to join the Board immediately. Additionally, and regardless of whether Greywood accepts this offer, the Company will: (1) conduct a strategic review focused on additional opportunities for increased shareholder value; and (2) by the upcoming AGM, reposition our CEO to Chair of the Board and retain a highly qualified interim CEO until a new permanent CEO is appointed by the Board. The new Chair and the Board (including the Greywood nominee) will work with the interim CEO on the strategic review, building on advanced and very exciting financial and strategic opportunities for the Company.

While Greywood has suggested that certain Enthusiast nominees, including Seth Berger, Alan Friedman, and Angela Ruggiero, will be offered the opportunity to serve on a Greywood Board. For clarity, none of the Enthusiast director nominees has given consent to serve on a Greywood nominated Board.

"I am pleased with the direction of the Company and the responsible approach that the Board has taken to try and end this distracting and costly proxy fight," commented Seth Berger, an Enthusiast nominee.

The Board is committed to moving past this chapter expeditiously.

The Way Forward

Shareholders need a strong Board that is able to capitalize on the unique positioning of Enthusiast and that is focused on creating meaningful value instead of chasing clout and the next shiny objects. This is why we are urging you to vote only your BLUE proxy FOR Enthusiast's director nominees.

Enthusiast remains committed to its ambitious plan to accelerate growth and continue margin expansion to achieve profitability. Our flywheel model, centered around communities, content, creators, and experiences, will continue to drive increasing value. Our team is well positioned to continue delivering results and value for the benefit of all shareholders. With so much potential right in front of us, now is not the time to risk your investment to unproven activist nominees.
